

PROCESS OF INDUCTION AND PAPERS GIVEN TO AN INDUCTEE

An individual on arrival at first induction is physically and mentally examined. If found qualified he is inducted into the Army of the United States and is then released from active duty and transferred to the enlisted corps for a period of 7 days. On release he is given a copy of the special orders showing that he is a member of the enlisted reserve corps of the Army of the United States, and he is told to report to designated center at the expiration of the 7 days.
